

PROWLING SANTA MONICA

At The Miramar

SEQUEL TO PROWLING THE PARK AND PALM SPRINGS

By the Ex-Editor

Vacation time again, and I was in the same predicament as I was last year when I went to Palm Springs—no money. You will remember, I solved that problem by selling my car to the Cypress Enterprise, but I figured the boss wouldn't fall for that again, even if he is my brother.

So I took a handful of money out of the drawer I had collected for the Christmas edition, put down under expenses, $80 for office supplies—(erasers, ink, etc.) and started getting ready for the resort I had decided on—the Miramar Hotel in Santa Monica.

I had just the car for an exclusive spot like the Miramar, the type that would impress upon them that I was a man of means, someone with money, not a former Iowa boy who thought palm trees were just extra large corn stalks that had sprouted tassels.

So I cleaned out the car, dumping the stack of racing forms my girl friend, Colorado Cutie, had deposited in the back seat, loaded all my stuff, and started out.

I had prepared myself to make an impression when I arrived by dressing as only a person in California with a flashy convertible should dress. I had the top down, and wore appropriate clothes. When I did pull up in a cloud of smoke at the entrance they noticed me all right.

In fact, you'd think those people had never seen a man driving a convertible before. I could see what I detected as envy in their eyes when I strode up to the desk, resplendent in my white coveralls, and my goggles jauntily shoved up on my forehead.

I Was Suspicious

But from the moment I entered the Miramar, things happened that made me suspicious of the place. I didn't take much notice when I went through the main entrance and thought I felt one of the attendants "frisk" me to make sure I carried a wallet.

When I filled out the registration card, however, I knew why he had done it. The first space was for my name. That was reasonable enough. The address was understandable too. But the questions, "Are you steadily employed?" and "What is your yearly income?" were the ones that tipped their hand. They want to make money off me, I deduced.

The whole staff was friendly and nice to me during my stay, but I was a little afraid I might have got off to a bad start with the bell boy who took my bags up.

Being a worldly man, I naturally was aware of the custom of tipping, but I had often been told not to overdo it. When the fellow put down my bags, brushed my coat, kissed my feet, and held out his hand, the horrible thought occurred to me that I wouldn't be able to tip him.

So I was frank, and I told him, "Sorry, fella, but you'll have to wait for your tip. I haven't got any small change, only nickles and dimes."

I couldn't quite analyse the look he gave me, but just so he wouldn't feel I was mad at him (he had done a good job), I leaned out the door as he was walking down the hall and waved and called a few affectionate good-byes.

They have a unique practice at the Miramar that I thought was really swell, at first. Later, I found I wasn't too enthusiastic about it, for several reasons.

Instead of paying for anything, like food or drinks, all you have to do is be sure you have a pencil at all times and sign the check. I thought it was awful nice of them, and of course, so that they would not think I was taking advantage of their generosity, I paid for things every once in a while.

I Make A Discovery

The first evening I was there, I found a wonderful little place called the Mirabar, and it was there

I discovered the real high type people I was associated with. I went in and sat down beside three fellows who were talking.

The one they called Dick seemed to be complaining, so I leaned over a bit and listened in. They MIGHT even buy me a free drink, I reasoned.

Dick was saying, "I usually don't have anything to do all day, except sit in my office and talk like we are now. But tomorrow is all fouled up. I made an appointment with a guy, and I've got to keep it."

As soon as the opportunity presented itself, I interrupted their conversation and said, "Up until now, I've been in the advertising business, myself. Taking a new job the first of the year."

They looked at me and didn't say anything, just went on talking after a moment's silence.

I thought maybe they didn't hear me so I said, "Got some pretty big accounts, too."

Finally the fellow they called Dick said, "Who for instance—Westinghouse, Procter & Gamble, Hoffman?"

"No," I answered as nonchalantly as I could. "Pete Oliver's Sporting Goods, U-Tel-Em and Bob's Markets, Grand Avenue Furniture, Henry's Drug, three drug accounts, in fact, and that's only a few of them." I turned to my drink to let that soak in, and they turned to theirs.

Then the one they called Paul got up and left. Dick said to Al, "I wouldn't mind having his job—a steady 40 to 50 a year."

"He must have some extra work too," I thought to myself. "He couldn't make ends meet on a salary like that, and stay here too."

"But," Dick continued, "I'm happy with my little $10,000 to $15,000 a year."

With this I signed my check without looking at the amount and sneaked up to my room. They might have wanted me to buy a round and I couldn't imagine the price of the stuff they were guzzling.

Expense Accounts

But it was the discussion about expense accounts I happened to overhear that really impressed me.

At breakfast the next morning, two gentlemanly looking gentlemen occupied the booth behind me.

One of them said, "How much do you think Smith's expense account should be for that ten day trip?"

To myself I said, "Put yourself in Smith's place. How much would you spend?"

Said the first man, "He'll probably have a guest at each meal."

Quick figuring on my part said that you should take your guest to the better restaurants to impress him, and at a dollar apiece, that would be six dollars a day, and of course they expected a little padding, so you could safely ask for seven dollars a day.

The first man continued, "And they'll have drinks, too."

Nothing's too good for a business guest, I said to myself, eastern beer at the least. In round figures, my daily expense would be at least nine bucks, or maybe a hundred for the ten days. Of course, if they crabbled too much, I had room to cut it down some.

This time it was the second man, who commented, "Yes, taking everything into consideration, I figured about ten dollars a meal, or from $300 to $500 for the ten days."

Must be in government work, I thought, and went back to eating and reading the racing form.

A Friend At Last

Even at a place like the Miramar, a person like me can find something in common with someone. Charles, the head waiter, was walking by my table (before he got the habit of putting me in the kitchen) and stopped to talk with me. When we got around to discussing the rainy opening at Santa

Anita that day, I mentioned our recent quarterhouse season in Orange county at Vessels'.

I might add here that since the bookies have all had to go underground due to the recent licensing by the government, I had contemplated maybe picking up a few honest bets around the lobby. Not to make any money, but just to accommodate my rich friends, and besides, I would be gone before they could trace the phone to my room.

But Charles wasn't a betting man, he said, and when I mentioned Vessels', he told me he was looking for an old friend from back east who owned a quarterhouse and was racing it at Vessels'.

If Charles would write the friend's name down, I told him, I would inquire around among my quarterhouse owning friends, and see if any of them knew him.

So Charles wrote his name on a slip of paper and said, "Just tell him Charles, the head waiter at the Statler Hotel in Washington D. C. was asking about him."

That was another miscalculation on my part. If he lived at the Statler, none of my friends would know him.

Money Trouble—Again

Friday I spent the entire day writing, so I decided a little entertainment was in order for the evening. Where was a good western movie showing, I wondered?

After looking through the papers, I saw that a show called "Quo Vadis" was playing at the "Four Star" theatre about twelve miles down Wilshire boulevard. Back in one of the Iowa towns I used to live in, there was a theatre called the "Twin Star" that played nothing but westerns, so I decided to take a chance.

It was this experience that made me regret the Miramar's custom of signing checks, which encouraged a person not to carry money.

When I arrived at the theatre, the only parking was in a nearby gas station, and they charged fifty cents. Oh well, I was on a vacation and was prepared to throw the filthy stuff around for a few days.

It was then I realized I had left all my money in my room, except for some loose change in my pocket, including the lucky silver dollar I carried. I pulled everything in my pocket out and dumped it on a table at the station. I had just enough to pay the attendant, and get into the show, so I gave him his share and rushed off. I had four cents left when I left the ticket booth.

After the show, I headed for the car and made the awful discovery that my keys were not in my pocket. The theatre didn't have them, and I couldn't find them on the street. To make things worse, the gas station was closed and it had started to rain.

In a brief moment, I summed up my predicament. It was raining and near midnight, I had four cents and was twelve miles from my hotel—with two cigarettes left.

Luckily, I had found myself in the same situation once in Calcutta during the war, so I knew what to do. I flagged a taxi and made a deal with the driver that he would take me home, follow me into the hotel to my room and collect. No wonder he was so eager for the fare—I sat on the edge of the seat all the way out, tensely watching the meter climb to $3.50!

Yes, just like some woman driver, I had left the keys, along with my cigarette lighter, in the gas station. And to top it off, "Quo Vadis" wasn't a western after all.

One of the best comparisons I have ever heard came from the fellow sitting next to me at the bar after I settled down from the movie incident.

The bartender was telling the three of us, all single men (at least the other two had the goal of a single man in mind—they may have had ever-loving wives stashed away somewhere), that a very pretty, blonde chick sat for two hours at the bar, alone, earlier in the evening. During all that time, he claimed, not one guy made an effort to get acquainted.

"You know," the fellow next to me said to the bartender, "you remind me of the guides they have at these private fishing resorts. You go out and fish all day, come in at night without a nibble, and he always says, 'You should have been here yesterday. Just yesterday, everyone who went out came back with their limit in no time at all!'"

That's about all, I guess. Except for a little trouble I had when I left. I finally found out why they didn't mind my signing all those checks. But I'll be able to go back and get my car, they said as soon as my brother Paul's check clears. They took my typewriter, too. Said I wouldn't need it where I was going.

CYPRESS DAIRYMEN LEAD IN LAW PROTECTION EFFORT

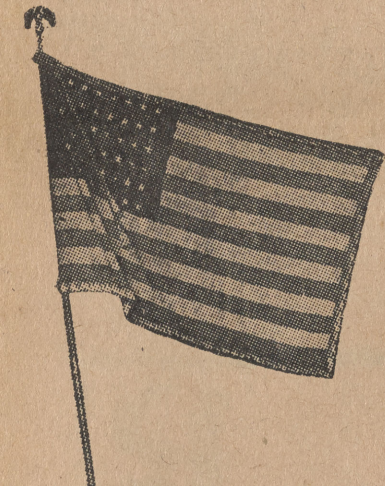

Dairymen of Orange county met in Santa Ana Tuesday evening. Seeking to protect their vast financial investments from infiltration by subdividers, they propose to frame a law for that purpose.

Preliminary step was the formation of a committee to present their request to the county planning commission. Chosen as chairman was Jake Van Dyke. He will be aided by Frank Ferreira, Jack DeVries, Tom Baroldi, Jr., and Martin Olstorn. All of these prominent leaders in their field live in or close to Cypress. Attending besides those from this area were county officers and residents from the Stanton and Westminster areas.

Dairymen wish to have broad rural areas zoned to exclude purchase of small plots of property by developers, it is reported. They claim that when a district becomes fairly well populated with homes, the dairymen are told to "move on" and find other acreages for their stock. They theorize large subdividers would not develop property in an area devoted primarily to raising of the milk cow. The 130 dairymen operating in the Cypress area alone each reportedly have from $150,000 to $500,000 investments.

Such zoning would not affect land within the accepted boundaries of a community. In Cypress, the residential area is zoned R-4 and the business section C-2, excluding dairies.

Mrs. Carl Nielsen, 5551 Saint Ann ave., appeared on "Queen for a Day" Friday, January 4. She was one of the five finalists for Queen and came away with a new iron and radio.

WE'RE FLAG WAVERS

A great American patriot once confessed, "Sure I'm a flag waver! Can you show me a better flag to wave?"

That's how the men who belong to the Veterans of Foreign Wars feel about their country—and we don't care a damn about the wisecracks of the smart alecks.

Being overseas veterans, we're not self-conscious when our patriotism shows. On the contrary, we believe it's high time to teach the youngsters of today there's nothing corny about waving the Stars and Stripes every chance you get.

That's why we are always promoting patriotic programs—the kind that will help our kids understand what a great country America is.

Sure, we're flag wavers, and we're proud of it. And that explains why those who understand the purpose of our flag waving never fail to say—

"THE V.F.W. IS A GOOD OUTFIT!"

'SACRAMENT' WILL BE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE TEXT

The earnest and consistent effort to worship God spiritually and to follow the example of Christ Jesus in daily life brings rich rewards declares the Bible Lesson on "Sacrament" in all Christian Science churches Sunday.

The Golden Text is from the Psalms (24:3, 4): "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart."

In a Bible selection Peter writes (I Pet. 3:12, 13, 15), "The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: . . . And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good? . . . But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy reads, "Are we benefited by praying? Yes, the desire which goes forth hungering after righteousness is blessed of our Father, and it does not return unto us void" (p. 2).

REBEKAHS PLAN INSTALLATION IN JANUARY

Members of the Rebekah lodge in Cypress will hold their regular meeting January 15. At that time final plans will be made for the installation of officers of the group which has been announced for January 29 at the school house. The installation will be a joint affair with the local Odd Fellow lodge.

Mrs. Mae Mansperger, Westminster, who is district deputy president, will install Mrs. Vickie Milbourn as noble grand; Mrs. Thelma Essex, vice grand; Mrs. Irma Stodart, recording secretary; Mrs. Anna McCoid, financial secretary and Mrs. Dorothy Lukens, treasurer.

Sunny Clime Enjoyed By Rogers' Kin

Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Rogers, 5542 Danny ave., assisted by their two daughters, Janette and Jeanne, have been entertaining Mrs. Rogers' grandfather, R. S. Ross, who hails from Missouri. A gay whirl of social activity has been taking place, as the family was joined during the holidays by her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Crapper and son, Gordon, of Hood River, Oregon. The Missourian and Oregonians were taken to many points of interest in southern California, and also spent a Sunday in Tijuana, Mexico, where the great grandchildren learned it is sometimes difficult to keep pace with their great grandfather.

Joining in on all the excitement were Mrs. Rogers' parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Ross, of Anaheim. Christmas day found them all present around the local Rogers' tree. There were so many gifts for the four generations represented, that the gift opening alone took three hours. Pictures were taken in the late afternoon following a ham breakfast and the traditional Christmas dinner.

Members Hear Lesson Story

When the Baptist missionary union met at the church this week, Mrs. Velma Strickland played for the singing led by Mrs. Cola Allen and opened the service with devotions.

The lesson was from the Royal Service program, "Good news for all who seek". Eleven were present.

Next Wednesday Mrs. Troy Stinson will be hostess at an all-day meeting. All ladies are invited to attend. Meeting adjourned with a prayer by Mrs. Aliene Kelley.

BAPTISTS TO HAVE GIDEON SOCIETY

Cypress Baptist church will welcome to the morning worship Sunday members of the Gideon society. They will have charge of the service.

Everyone is invited to attend this meeting.

FAITH TABERNACLE BEGINS REVIVAL

In a timely revival beginning Sunday, the Faith Tabernacle will feature the "Musical Montes", Thomas and Ruth, according to the pastor, the Rev. Clarence G. Eigenhuis.

The meetings will be held nightly except Monday beginning at 7:30 o'clock in the church, 5381 Lincoln avenue, with singing and preaching at each service. The Sunday morning service will be the dedication of children to the Lord.

Mission Group Will Meet At Allen's

Mrs. P. K. Allen, 8671 Walker street, will be hostess to members of the Garnet Howard chapter, Women's Foreign Missionary society, of the Cypress Church of the Nazarene, when it holds its regular monthly meeting Monday night. She will be assisted by Mrs. Dave Bock.

Special emphasis will be placed on "National workers" during the study hour. Mrs. W. D. Howard is superintendent of study.

The meeting will take place in the Allen's home.

Visitors in the Mrs. Ruth Lockman home were Mr. and Mrs. Preston Ward of San Francisco who enjoyed a trailer trip to Palm Springs.

Mrs. Fred Walley returned home Monday from a two months' visit in Sioux City, Iowa, with her daughter and her family and other relatives. Mrs. Walley grew accustomed to the climate, but suffered a severe cold while away.

PRIZE CONTEST FOR BEST MACADAMIA NUT

The California Avocado Society through its Subtropical Variety Committee has sponsored a contest to determine the best Macadamia Nut grown in California. The Macadamia Nut (or Queensland Nut) is native to Australia but is grown commercially in Hawaii; its outstanding flavor makes it universally popular; its quality and short supply make it quite expensive. There are several hundred of these trees growing in Southern California, largely as ornamentals.

The California Avocado Society desires to stimulate interest of growers in the Macadamia Nut and offers prizes totalling $50 for the five finest nut samples submitted. Requests for application forms shall be mailed to Elwood Trask, Pres., California Avocado Society, 4833 Everett Ave., Los Angeles, California, or to Wells W. Miller, Rt. 2, Box 1197, Vista, California.

MARCH OF DIMES HELPS TWICE-HIT FAMILY—Janet and Willis Dey of 653 S. Union Ave., Brea, both have been hit by polio and helped by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Janet has no trace of the disease today. But Willis still spends approximately 11 hours each day in an iron lung provided by the Orange county chapter of the Foundation. A physical therapist from the chapter visits Will three times a week now and advises his mother on the exercises she gives the 10-year old boy. Willis' father said: "The Foundation has helped us bear a burden we couldn't have borne alone". The March of Dimes campaign is now under way in Orange County and throughout the nation.

Local Topics

Mrs. Mary E. Sutton, who makes her home in Artesia, was moved on Saturday to the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sutton, 5582 Crescent ave, where she is being cared for. She was stricken December 22 with a serious illness. Mrs. Sutton is eighty-five years young.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Colvin noted their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary Wednesday, spending the day quietly at home as they received the congratulations of close friends and relatives.

It is reported that John Farnell, Cypress' able boatbuilder, has on order several that are bigger than those heretofore completed here, and that two builders from Glasgow, Scotland, will join him soon. Materials are at the moment holding up the building.

Mrs. Tom Demiris, Mrs. J. E. Smith and Mrs. H. J. G. Kreissler spent the weekend at Desert Hot Springs. At least, that is where they headquartered. Much time was spent in driving around and enjoying the desert scenery. Mrs. Kreissler purchased a 5-acre tract of land before the trio returned.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Weber visited Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hazlett this weekend, as did Mrs. Hazlett's mother, Mrs. Virginia Quast from Long Beach. Mrs. Weber, a former Cypress resident, is school bank teller in a Fullerton bank, interesting work which is similar to the program being carried on in the school here.

Mrs. Raymond Dye is spending the winter months with her sister in Long Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Dye were Cypress residents until his orders to Seattle with the coast guard. He is currently on cruise.

Mrs. Mae E. McPherson, who was taken to Anaheim hospital several weeks ago when she became seriously ill, has been transferred to the women's ward at the county hospital where she will remain for an indefinite period.

Entertained at the Ernest Hazlett, home, 8351 Moody street, were her father, M. J. Nolen, his wife and their daughter, Louella Nolen, of Manzanola, Colorado. They left Wednesday for home, after visiting many points of interest. The train at Knott's Berry Farm is of especial interest to the Hazlett's, since they saw it last year in its natural habitat in Colorado when they visited Hazlett's brother.

Andy Kolosky, well-liked butcher at the M & H Market, has been assigned an insurance territory. His place is being taken in the meat department by Lester Cowan of Salt Lake City, Utah. He and his wife have a son three years old and a daughter 16.

Orville Kelley injured two fingers of his left hand when they became caught in a belt. He is a carpenter.

EXCESSIVE SPEED KILLS

Excessive speed is still one of the most notorious causes of injury and death on our streets and highways, advises the National Automobile Club. Wise motorists adjust their driving to varying conditions and never drive at speeds that will endanger their own lives or the lives of others.

MANY DISEASES OCCUR IN COUNTY

Six new cases of polio marked the final two-weeks report of the county health department for 1951, just announced, the report showing a total of 163 cases of communicable disease appearing during that period.

Chicken pox, with 56 cases, strep throat infections, including scarlet fever, numbering 35 cases, and 24 cases of mumps, were the leaders for the two weeks period.
